TCCC honors longevity

Tri-County Community College (TCCC) honored eight of its employees recently with a presentation of service awards.

President Norman G. Oglesby, Ph.D., led the brief ceremony and congratulated each recipient on behalf of TCCC and its Board of Trustees.

Lisa Thompson of Marble was recognized for 15 years service with the college. She coordinates the Community Service classes in the college Continuing Education division.

The rest of the awardees had each completed five years of service.

They included: Jason Chambers of Unaka, who is the TCCC Director of Admissions; Iris DeRosa of Bear Paw, who directs the TCCC Child Development Center; Lee Ann Hodges of Hayesville, an English instructor; John Rayburn of Andrews who teaches welding at the TCCC Graham County Center; Cecil Warren of Andrews, who is on the maintenance staff at the main campus; Marie Whittaker of Young Harris, GA, who is the coordinator of the North Carolina Information Highway and Brian Wolf of Morganton, GA, who is the TCCC System Administrator.
